Jojo Mayer + Nerve show you the meaning of electronica live

Jojo Mayer + Nerve

These Swiss drum 'n' bass, dubstep and techno artists know how to get crowds pumped in non-traditional ways. Two of the hottest artists based in New York City these days, Jojo Mayer and Nerve bring you clean and creative music from the homeland of electronica. All the tunes are performed live on acoustic instruments in real time so the magic literally happens right before your eyes. Plus, these guys have a tradition of performing for packed crowds around the world, so they know how to whip up a crowd. ¥150

PARTY OF THE WEEK

Revolutionary Art

Innovation: Boys Noize infuses Chinese sounds into music

▶ This frenetic German DJ has been spreading his version of harmonic noise around the globe for years. And he's set to return to Beijing on October 27 at Tango after killing a packed house last year in the same venue. This time around, he tells us, he'll be debuting some of the tunes from his first fully-produced and co-written album Ivory Tower.

Boys Noize tells us he is "looking forward to China so much," and that he "loves the country, the food and the people." Inspired by the world around him, he adds that he incorporated sounds from China into his latest album: "There is one Gonzales song we did where I actually used some Chinese drum sounds in the song 'Pixel Poxel'."

But innovation doesn't come easy. The electro punk mashup DJ says he seeks inspiration from the world around him. "It's the love of the music.

If I wasn't looking for new music and playing it, I wouldn't enjoy DJing anymore."

A diverse artist in his own right, Boys Noize has worked with the likes of Depeche Mode, Snoop Dogg and The Black Eyed Peas. His hard work hasn't gone unnoticed, either. He's scored some sweet awards over the years.

Where can you find Boys Noize when not on the decks? He was wild about the hutong scene on his last visit and noted that he "really enjoyed the small paths and houses." You may find him wandering around the Lama Temple snapping photos like any regular tourist. ¥100 (presale)-¥150 (door)
